
MACHINE GUNS AND SHORT-BARRELED FIREARMS

APRIL 4, 1952.—Committed to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union and ordered to be printed

Mr. DOUGHTON, from the Committee on Ways and Means, submitted the following

R E P O R T

[To accompany H. R. 7189]

The Committee on Ways and Means, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7189) to amend the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code which relate to machine guns and short-barreled firearms, so as to impose a tax on the making of sawed-off shotguns and to extend such provisions to Alaska and Hawaii, and for other purposes, having considered the same, report favorably thereon with an amendment and recommend that the bill, as amended, do pass.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 2, line 7, strike out "firearms" and insert "firearm".

PURPOSE

The purpose of the bill is to bring the act of making sawed-off shotguns and rifles, or otherwise transforming a weapon into a firearm, within the tax on firearms imposed by subchapter B of chapter 25 of the Internal Revenue Code and to provide for the forfeiture of any firearm produced in this manner without the tax first having been paid. The bill would also extend the provisions of the National Firearms Act to the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii.

GENERAL STATEMENT

The principal purpose of the enactment of subchapter B of chapter 25 and part VIII of subchapter A of chapter 27 of the Internal Revenue Code (known as the National Firearms Act) was to control the traffic in machine guns and sawed-off guns, the type of firearms commonly used by the gangster element. The Congress felt that such control was necessary to curb the growing frequency of crimes of violence in which people were killed or injured by the use of such dangerous weapons.

The National Firearms Act defines a firearm to mean a shotgun or rifle having a barrel of less than 18 inches in length, or any other weapon, except a pistol or revolver, from which a shot is discharged by an explosive if such weapon is capable of being concealed on the person, or a machine gun, including a muffler or silencer for any firearm whether or not such firearm is included within the foregoing definition, but not including a rifle of .22 caliber or less with a barrel 16 inches or more in length. The act also levies an occupation tax upon the business of the importer and manufacturer of and dealer in such firearms and excise taxes on the transfer of such firearms; makes it unlawful for any person to transfer a firearm except in pursuance to a written order from the transferee on an application approved by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue; makes it unlawful to possess a firearm which has been transferred without conformity with the transfer provisions; and provides controls over imports and exports of firearms.

The Treasury Department is charged with the enforcement of this act. Your committee is advised that the act has had a salutary effect upon the public and that its enforcement has been, to a large extent, effective in keeping gangster-type firearms, particularly machine guns and machine pistols, out of the hands of criminals. From June 26, 1934, to March 31, 1952, 51,297 firearms were registered with the Department by individuals. During the same period, 526,755 firearms were registered by manufacturers and 905,987 transfers of firearms of all kinds were recorded. From October 1941, to March 31, 1952, 3,171 firearms were seized, including 285 made by sawing off barrels, and 441 cases were reported for prosecution. A continuous educational program has evoked wide support from private citizens, civic groups, sportsmen's organizations and law-enforcement officers. One of the results has been that 8,861 firearms have been deactivated, that is, rendered unserviceable, by the Department in the interest of public safety with the consent and at the request of the owners.

Since the effective control over fully automatic firearms, such as machine guns and machine pistols, has made it difficult for criminals to obtain such firearms, the sawed-off shotgun has become the favorite offensive weapon of such criminals. By the comparatively simple device of purchasing standard shotguns from legitimate dealers and then sawing off the barrels to a length of less than 18 inches, criminals are able to make vicious weapons without incurring the penalties of the act. Since such weapons are seldom transferred after the barrels have been sawed off, the owners cannot be prosecuted for possession of a firearm unlawfully transferred. Hence, the act does not reach those who possess sawed-off shotguns made in this manner. It is this defect in the act which the bill is designed to correct.

DETAILED EXPLANATION

Section 1 of the bill brings such sawed-off shotguns under the act by taxing the action of sawing off the barrel or otherwise making such firearm, by requiring the filing of a declaration of intention and payment of the tax prior to such making, and by imposing the penalties of the act upon those making such firearms without first paying the tax and filing the declaration of intention. Your committee believes this provision will enable the Department of the Treasury to control more effectively the traffic in sawed-off shotguns.

Section 2 of the bill would extend the provisions of the National Firearms Act to the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii.

Section 2720 imposes a tax upon the transfer of firearms in the continental United States. Subsections (d), (e), and (f) of section 2733 define importer, manufacturer, and dealer to mean those engaged in the business of importing, manufacturing, or selling firearms in the continental United States. Section 2733 (c) defines "continental United States" as the States of the United States and the District of Columbia. Hence, the provisions of the act dealing with taxes on transfers of, importers and manufacturers of, and dealers in firearms and with registrations of firearms are applicable only in the several States and the District of Columbia. Transfers of firearms within Alaska and Hawaii or from dealers in the several States to purchasers in such Territories are not now taxable, and dealers in firearms in such Territories are not liable to pay the occupational taxes. Since all other excise taxes have been made applicable to Alaska and Hawaii, your committee believes that the excise taxes imposed by the National Firearms Act should also be made applicable to such possessions.

Section 3 of the proposed bill adds certain technical amendments which are made necessary by the addition of section 2734, provided for in section 1 of the bill, and by the extension of the Firearms Act to Alaska and Hawaii, as provided for in section 2 of the bill.

Sections 2723 (c), 2726 (a), 2730 (a), 2731, and 3263 (b) are amended to make such sections conform with the provisions of the proposed section 2734 (sec. 1 of this bill).

Section 3261 (b) is amended by striking out the proviso, which states an exception to the requirement of registration, and adding in place thereof a new statement which would include within the exception those who comply with the new section 2734 provided for in section 1 of the bill. This amendment is deemed necessary because of the addition of new section 2734. Under section 3261 (b) there will be a continuing requirement to register all firearms not acquired in conformity with any applicable provisions of the act, irrespective of the date of acquisition. Because of this continuing requirement, subsection (c) of section 3261, in respect of a presumption as to the time of acquiring an unregistered firearm, is repealed as no longer necessary for the effective enforcement of the act.

Section 4 of the bill provides for the effective date of such bill and imposes certain limitations upon the enforcement of the National Firearms Act in Alaska and Hawaii. These limitations are designed to prevent inequities in the application of the act to such Territories.
